

---

FIP STATEMENT ON WITHDRAWALS FROM THE WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION

12 February 2025

As healthcare professionals focused on delivering global health through universal health coverage, the International Pharmaceutical Federation (FIP), stands firm in our belief that the future of global health lies in collaboration, solidarity, and collective effort. In times when pandemics, climate change, emerging diseases, and health disparities threaten to destabilise global well-being, the World Health Organization (WHO) remains a vital institution in promoting health security, equity, and sustainability worldwide.

While we recognise the unique challenges and differing priorities of individual nations, we must not lose sight of the larger picture — health is a universal right, and the well-being of one nation affects the well-being of all. Global health issues transcend borders, and it is only through unity and mutual support that we can effectively address them. The WHO provides a platform for equitable research, distribution of resources, and coordinated response to health crises. The collaborative infrastructure it provides allows nations to share knowledge, provide support during emergencies, and work towards solutions for long-term health challenges. This is especially important as the world faces the growing burden of chronic diseases, mental health issues, and the ongoing threat of infectious diseases.

We call upon all nations to remember that global health challenges require global solutions. By strengthening international cooperation, we ensure that every individual, regardless of their geographical location, has access to the health care and resources needed to live a healthy life. FIP believes that together, we can overcome these challenges and build a more resilient, healthy future for all.