

Biography

Prof. Sang Guowei, clinical pharmacologist, was born in Shanghai on 11th November 1941. He obtained his postgraduate degree at Department of Pharmacology, First Medical College of Shanghai in 1966. During 1979-1981, he took the visiting scholar programme at Department of Physiology, Cambridge University, and Department of Steroid Biochemistry, Royal Postgraduate Medical School, University of London respectively with the diploma of clinical pharmacology (London) awarded. He was invited by the World Health Organization to serve as the temporary adviser and Steering Committee Member for the Special Programme of Research in Human Reproduction during 1983-1989. He was a visiting professor and faculty member in the Division of Clinical Pharmacology, and Department of Medicine, New York Hospital, Cornell University Medical College during 1989-1990. He acted as the Councilor, Section of Clinical Pharmacology, International Union of Pharmacology during 1992-2000. Prof. Sang was elected as the Member of Chinese Academy of Engineering in 1999. He was the former Director-General of National Institute for Control of Pharmaceutical & Biological Products during 1999-2007. Prof. Sang has made a series of achievements in pharmacokinetic/pharmacodynamic studies and large scale multi-center clinical trials on long-acting steroids, norethisterone enanthate, ethinyl estradiol and antiprogestosterone mifepristone, and molecular toxicological studies on gossypol.

In 2008, Prof Sang was assigned as the Chief Designer of the Special Programme “National Major Innovative Drug”. Since then he has been played the key part to be responsible for the overall programme strategic design and the actual implementation to boost the innovative drug development in China. In 2014, He was awarded with the FIP Lifetime Achievement for Pharmaceutical Science by International Pharmaceutical Federation (FIP).

He acted as Deputy Chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress (NPC) during 2008-2013. Currently he is the President of Chinese Pharmaceutical Association (CPA).